Robin Sharma Launches New Social Network: SuccessNation

Toronto, Canada: SuccessNation, one of the first social networks dedicated to inspiring and improving the lives of its members, was recently launched by leadership expert Robin Sharma. This new social network is offered universally for free, and users can register at www.SuccessNation.com.

Commenting on the launch of SuccessNation, Robin Sharma said, "For years, I have felt that my fans have wanted a medium to interact, share ideas, and support one another. This has been especially true in these recent tough times. So with SuccessNation, I have created a true social network where everyone can come together to share their stories, develop lasting friendships, and discuss powerful ideas. SuccessNation has allowed me to interact with my fans, and non-fans alike, in a way that I've never been able to do. I really think that the sky is the limit with SuccessNation, and with time, it will grow exponentially and be the source of ideas and inspiration for millions of people."

SuccessNation is a powerful social network that allows members to interact personally with one another and learn from one of the greatest leadership and personal development thinkers of our time, Robin Sharma. The focus of the social network is to inspire and motivate members along Robin Sharma's philosophy of Lead Without Title, and to provide a community for people to come together to share positive ideas to help members get through these turbulent times and economy. As SuccessNation grows, it will feature content from other thought leaders from around the globe. In its first week after launch, SuccessNation had grown its membership to nearly 5,000 members from close to 100 different nations.
